Mass Meeting of Citizens

Declare Themselves Favorable to Continuance of War Until Desired Results Are Achieved.

The meeting of citizens held at the opera house on Sunday night last, in commemoration of the second anniversary of Great Britain's entrance into the war, was not as well attended as should be expected.

The chair was occupied by Mayor Sinclair, who was supported on the platform by Messrs. J. E. Gillis, J. F. Hunter, R. Green, Rev. H. Clay, Rev. Dr. Gray, Rev. W. T. Young (of Frank), and members of the local branches of the Red Cross Society and Patriotic Fund.

The meeting opened with prayer, led by Dr. Gray.

The speaker of the evening was Mr. J. E. Gillis, who introduced the subject of the evening in a very able manner. His remarks in brief were as follows: Just two years ago last Friday, Great Britain entered upon the greatest war in human history. She entered upon it through love of principle and with a solemn purpose to vindicate the right among the nations of the world. Perhaps at that time we were little aware of the fact that two years thence we would be meeting here in commemoration of that event.

But, nevertheless, it is true that although two years have elapsed, the war is still in progress and we are here tonight to express our solemn determination to keep it going until complete victory is achieved. It was only when Germany invaded Belgium, when Germany broke that solemn treaty which she had signed so many years before, that Great Britain stepped into the arena. Fortunately she had her fleet intact, that fleet which has played such an important part in preserving the liberty of the seas and her own proud position of "Mistress of the Seas" and she sent it into action. She was, however, unprepared on land, and if the people of this Empire, and the world, desire a good, a peace as distinct as any proof can be, that Germany and Austria began this war, it is the unprepared condition of the Allies at that time. France, from her very position, found it necessary to keep a standing army of immense proportions; but that army was not in readiness. Russia, which has perhaps the largest reserve of men of any nation of the world, was unprepared. And what shall we say of Great Britain? Great Britain in 1890 sent the largest expeditionary force in her history to South Africa, but that force did not compare with the force that the Dominion of Canada has sent to her aid.

She had about 150,000 only to take the field in Flanders; but Mr. Asquith, with remarkable sagacity, called to his counsels that man whose name shall be immortal—Erli Kitchener—and from the day that Erli Kitchener first sat in the war office in London, that immense human machine, that marvel of the world, that volunteer army of which we are now so proud, has steadily developed, and today it has reached the marvellous proportions of nearly four million men. Erli Kitchener has unfortunately passed out of active service as far as the progress of this war is concerned, but his memorial will be that valiant army, that fighting force now on the fields of Flanders, which I venture to say will be the deciding factor in this war. Upon this second anniversary of the declaration of war, there are certain lessons which should be taken home to ourselves, certain resolutions which should be adopted, and a certain determination that should find lodgment in the minds of every patriotic British subject. We are not in this war for the purpose of aggression, not for the purpose of acquiring territory, not for the purpose of acquiring riches. We are in this war, as the history of the war will show, in pure vindication of a principle; and that principle is that nations, as individuals, should preserve their sacred treaty obligations. We are in this war in vindication of the rights of small and insignificant (if you will) nations, to preserve their own integrity, no matter what may befall their neighbors, and if between man and man in our daily routine of life we place value upon good faith, we should be willing with our treasure, eye with our lives, to back up our own Empire in this crisis. We should back up, giving her our moral and material support, not alone because we are her subjects, but because we recognize that she has taken a stand which commands our approbation and pride. She has taken a stand against the nations which we shall always be proud of as British subjects, and we should register our approbation, and I am sure we will. Not only have we made, or at least our friends and relatives have made sacrifices since the war began. We have those friends and relatives about us; we have their dependents at our very doors, dependents who have been deprived of those strong arms which were their support before the war, and it is to them that we should stretch forth the hand of assistance in the hour of their trial. They have sent forth their friends and their relatives to fight with us, and they are not as well supplied with the goods of this world as they were before. We are their debtors, and consequently we should leave no stone unturned, whereby they may be assisted as far as lies in our power. It should then be tonight, on this second anniversary of this war, besides our solemn determination to carry it to a successful issue, our solemn resolve to assist those who have made such sacrifice and who have undergone such suffering in our behalf. I shall therefore not delay you, but to crystallize the purpose for which we are here tonight, I propose to read a resolution, and Mr. Mayor will ask you to vote upon it before the close of this meeting.

The resolution read as follows:

"BE IT RESOLVED, that on the threshold of the third year of a righteous war now being waged by Great Britain and her Allies against the central powers of Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey, we the citizens of Blairmore and vicinity give public expression to our sympathy with the allied cause, to our desire that this war shall continue until that cause is fully achieved, and to our firm and inflexible resolve to perform every duty devolving upon us as British subjects in this crisis, even to the sacrifice of our property and lives if these be necessary."

Following the singing of "O Canada" by the children, Rev. J. F. Hunter spoke briefly to the resolution. He made a strong appeal on behalf of the Red Cross and Patriotic Fund, and trusted that Blairmore would continue to uphold the glorious traditions of the Empire.

Mr. Russell Green addressed the French and Belgian people.

Rev. Mr. Clay—"I want to add all the little power I can to this resolution, because I feel that it expresses very adequately what we all feel in our hearts. We have, as an Empire, taken in hand to do a certain work, and we believe that that work is an inspired work. This war on our side is so different from all other wars. We began it, thank God, in the right spirit. As one speaker has already remarked, it is a war of principle, and we have got to fight for principle in no unhesitating spirit, for principles are everything. We believe in justice and righteousness. These may be to some mere words, but to our minds they are words which have a real meaning, and we are determined with all power that we can put into it, to go on with this struggle until we achieve the end for which we set out. I have in my hand a little Serbian quotation, and I want to read it to you. It is a Serbian proverb: "Better a body in rags and a soul in silk, than a body in silk and a soul in rags," and that is exactly what we feel. We know what Canada is doing. When you come to think of what has already been done in this district of ours, why it is little short of marvellous; but, you know, the more you do, the more power we seem to get to do, and I feel that the mere fact that we have accomplished so much alone that we have in our power to do even more. The war is not over yet. It means more sacrifice; but by the help of God we are going to make it."

Rev. Mr. Young was happy at having an opportunity of speaking to this resolution. He thought that with all that had been said, all that was needed of him was the expression that the people of Frank were in sympathy with that resolution and that everyone of us will do our part in helping to carry out the sentiment of it. During the last two years we have learned much. To appreciate the flag is one thing. The flag means more to us today than ever before in the history of Canada. We have learned the lesson of sacrifice. The nation, like the individual, that is self-centered, soon becomes a useless affair. Its object is only for itself. We are at the present time facing a great issue in connection with our Patriotic Fund. He wondered if there was anyone who was not giving towards this fund, and who was living in this country with eyes closed to all that is going on. He felt that if there was, such a man should be in Berlin, because he and the Kaiser were of the same spirit. The very fact that there are men

The Other Day

A traveller from Calgary came into our place for lunch. "This is the best bread I have ever eaten," he said. "We don't get anything like that in Calgary."—the highest praise from a discriminating buyer. Monday, a young lady from Calgary made the remark: "I never ate such good bread. I must take some back with me." Two instances of unsolicited testimony; and we could cite many more. There must be a reason, and there is—First-Grade Flour, the Best Yeast that can be bought, with Shortening and Sugar, thoroughly blended in the right proportions and carefully baked. The answer is living here who came from the German Empire is proof that they ought to be giving a proper share towards our Patriotic Fund. Our little community of Frank had done her part. She has not done all she could. Every person earning money from the community is giving 1% at least and some are giving 2% of their earnings towards the Fund. As for the Red Cross, our local committee was doing great work, and yet there were a great number of ladies whose husbands were still at home, whose lives are still undisturbed by the present war, whose pocket books are untouched, and who are not taking part in doing anything towards this work.

A collection was taken on behalf of the Patriotic Fund, which amounted to $24.60.

The resolution was endorsed by the entire audience, after which the national anthem brought the meeting to a close. We regret that space would not permit us giving the several addresses in full.

Those who feel they have any kick against the local branch of the Patriotic Fund should attend the meetings of that committee and voice their grievances.

The Dutch steamship Gallia has arrived at St. John's, Newfoundland, four days out of New York, with a cargo of gasoline. She was held up in the belief that she is the mother ship with a supply of gasoline for the German submarine Deutschland, now on her way across the Atlantic. Her reason for calling at St. John's was an alleged shortage of water.

Off Of Orilene Will Reduce Weight A Pound A Day is many instances. — If you suffer from, excessive fat, stomach or liver disorders perhaps you do not know your trouble may be due to lack of oxygen in the blood. — How to tell

If you will make an actual test of all people who are fat, who suffer from stomach, liver, or kidney trouble, you would be surprised at the exceedingly large number who lack oxygen in the blood and who are fat and ailing from no other cause. Without oxygen the blood loses its power to properly assimilate your food and consequently your flesh instead of being firm pink and healthy, becomes flabby, soft and bluish gray. As a result of this blood starvation you become fat and slow, generally weakened, all run down and soon get to a point where the metastomation leaves you breathless and suffing like a porcupine. In all such cases it is worse than useless to dose yourself with nauseous drugs or powerful laxatives as this will only weaken your vital powers for the moment, may be at the expense of your life later on.
And you must not conclude to put on weight. Everyone knows fatty degeneration of the heart liver or kidneys is exceedingly dangerous.

No matter what anyone tells you, if you are fat you are to yourself to make the following test: take a long deep breath and then see how many steps you can take without being compelled to rest it out. Next take an oil of orilene capsule, one after each meal and one at bed time for two weeks then make the same test again. You will be surprised to see how much farther you can walk and how much lighter and easier you will feel on your feet. People who are fat and ailing all the time may double their strength and endurance and reduce weight a pound a day by simply taking all of orilene.
Oil of orilene capsules are designed to increase the little red corpuscles in the blood making it possible for the blood to carry more oxygen, supplying the body with more life more vitality and more vim. Absolutely harmless, will not injure the most delicate, wonderfully efficient.
It is dispensed in the city by all druggists or

Conservation Bulletin

A report just issued by the Commission of Conservation, "Conservation of Fish, Birds and Game," directs attention to the great value of these resources to Canada. The volume is a report of the proceedings of a conference of the commission on Fisheries, Game and Fur-bearing Animals of the Commission, and contains a fund of information regarding the present condition and the necessity for protection of Canada's fish, birds and mammals.

Canada is taking a prominent part in the international movement for the protection of wild life. A Migratory Bird Treaty between Canada and the United States is under consideration. Through the influence of the Commission of Conservation and other interests, bird reservations are being created, where the birds may find safe nesting and breeding places.

The fur-bearing animals of Northern and Western Canada are being rapidly exterminated. This is clearly shown by the present report. To secure their more adequate protection, the Commission is advocating the amendment of the Northwest Game Act to place responsibility for its administration upon the Dominion National Parks Branch, which already protects the animals in the Dominion National Parks.

The future of the fisheries of Canada is in an able manner by the highest authorities in this country. That they are of great present value is recognized, but there is also a potential value in our oceanic and inland waters which, upon development, would mean the creation of new industries. To meet this condition, the Commission is suggesting vocational training and simple demonstrations for the fishermen, and that they may take advantage of the most practical and modern methods of their crafting.

The report is replete with illustrations applicable to the subject matter.

British patrolling squadrons and is at the present time tied up in the Northwest Arm, an estuary of the harbor of

Why The Patriotic Fund Is Not Raised By Taxation

In view of the fact that a new campaign to raise money for the Patriotic Fund will be started very shortly, the central committee for Southern Alberta has just given out the following statement explaining why the Patriotic Fund is raised by voluntary subscription instead of by taxation.

Under the Canadian system of constitutional government the right of direct taxation upon lands and similar resources rests in the hands of the provincial governments and the municipalities. The province of Alberta would have the right to raise money for patriotic purposes by imposing a property and poll tax, but no legislation to that end has been passed and could not now be enacted and it made effective in time to provide the fund needed this year for the war and disaster dependents, and it must also be remembered that under existing conditions the collection of taxes either by the provincial government or the municipalities is so slow that the dependents of soldiers would starve before money from that source would be available, and the cost of collecting the tax would be at least ten times what it costs to collect the voluntary contributions.

The Dominion Government could, of course, provide a patriotic fund by donating so many millions of dollars for that purpose, but the Government's outlay is already very much more than its income from taxation, and any additional outlay would have to be met by the issue of bonds. This would mean that the people of Canada, instead of providing for the wives and children of our soldiers out of their income, would be providing for them out of borrowed money, which would have to be paid back in years to come, and these same wives and children and such of the soldiers as return would have to pay their share of this debt. It would be most assistance to families of our noble defenders that had attached to it the condition that in years to come they must pay it back with interest in some form of taxation.

Under the Canadian system, recruiting is voluntary, and it seems consistent that those who from inability or choice are not in uniform should show their good spirit by a voluntary contribution to the Patriotic Fund. To make the nation's contribution by taxation would remove from it all the virtue of a voluntary donation, and it is believed in the days, when the men at the front and their relatives are making such tremendous sacrifices, there few, if any, at home who do not wish to voluntarily make some contribution to the general cause.
In order, however, that those who attempt to evade their responsibility and withhold their share from the fund contribute to the Patriotic Fund at home be properly labelled, it is the intention this year to publish not only lists of donations, but also lists of those who are known to be in a position to assist this cause and who refuse to do so.

It may be added that the whole question of taxation vs. voluntary contribution has had the most serious consideration by those who have the welfare of the fund at heart, and the voluntary system seems the only present solution.
By this voluntary system able men and women are giving their services in whole or in part absolutely without charge and the percentage of the contributions which actually reach the beneficiaries is very much greater than would be possible under any system of taxation, where all services rendered would have to be paid for. It is also worth pointing out that it is much easier to get some men out of taxation than to get rid of it, and the opinion of those who have made study of this problem is that it is wiser to meet the situation by voluntary contributions than to introduce some additional tax which would result as a memento of the war, perhaps to future generations.

John Burns Dies Suddenly At Home

John Burns, aged 62 years, died suddenly Friday afternoon at his home, 423 Silica street, Nelson, as the result of an attack of apoplexy.

Mr. Burns contracted an attack of bronchitis about three weeks ago and had been confined to his bed, but had apparently recovered almost completely several days prior to his death. Since Wednesday he had been up and about as usual and his death therefore came quite unexpectedly yesterday afternoon. In the morning he rose as usual and spoke of feeling much improved in health.

About 3 o'clock he complained of a feeling of dizziness which was followed by an immediate collapse. He was beyond medical aid before his physician could be summoned.

Mr. Burns was born in Belfast, Ireland, and came to Canada about 35 years ago, followed his trade as a carpenter in several eastern cities before coming to Nelson 18 years ago. For the past 12 years, he had been engaged as a contractor throughout the United States operations in the city and throughout the district, the firm of John Burns & Son, of which he was the senior partner, having constructed a number of residences and public buildings. He is survived by a widow and three sons, John Burns of Nelson, Henry Burns, manager of the McLaren Lumber Co.'s mill at Blairmore, and Robert Burns of Humboldt, Sask.

Although not actively associated with any religious body he attended the Presbyterian church.

The funeral of the late John Burns took place at Nelson on Tuesday, and was largely attended.

Mrs. L.W.'s mother, who had been in camp for some time, left on Wednesday for her home at Youngstown.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs.
David Morris went through a slight operation at the local hospital this week, and is reported doing well.

The service of baptism was administered in Bellevue by Rev. W.
T. Young on Sun day last, when the infant child of Rev. Mr. Law was baptized.

Fred Chappell is in receipt of a letter from Frank Roseley, who was recently reported in the wounded list. Frank was doing well in a hospital in France.

The memorial service in honor of Sergt.-Major George E. Geary, held in the Methodist church on Sunday evening was very well attended and Rev. Mr. Law spoke some good words in regard to the soldier and man, and paid a glad tribute to the men who are giving their all for the cause of freedom and justice and the saving of the Empire and the home.

Honor to whom honor is due. Mr. F. W. Baillie, manager of the Canadian Cartridge Company, Hamilton, Ontario, has returned to the government the sum of $750,000 his firm's profit on war orders. The company has made a million cartridges cases for the government without accepting a single cent of profit. This is a shining example of genuine patriotism—an example that does much to offset the graft charges we have heard so much about.—Ex.

NOTICE

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN—Having previously advertised that I would not be responsible for any debt contracted in my name by any member of my family, I will protest any claims made against me of such.

As Mrs. J. C. Patton has removed and making her home in Coleman, having left my home and bed, I will sell by public auction all household furniture and effects, and pay any outstanding claims there may be against us.

A Lesson From The Aeroplane

The force that makes the aeroplane—a heavier than air machine—overcome the law of gravity is the propulsive power of the motor. Stop the engine and gravity exhibits its law.

In much the same way the propulsive power of advertising makes a business triumph over dragging-down tendencies, personal inertia, quiet times and general business depression.

Advertising is the propeller. The merchant is the pilot. His business is the machine. His community is his sustaining medium. If you want business to soar, start the motor of advertising.

FIVE MILLION MEN WITHOUT A WAR

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE WITHOUT COMPULSION

Recruiting Has Resulted in Enlistment of One Man Out of Every Nine of the Population of the United Kingdom According to the Latest Estimates

Great Britain and the dominions across the sea, not including India, have raised since the war began five million men for army and navy without compulsion, service, England, Scotland and Wales have about 42,000,000 and Ireland 4,000,000 people. The chief contribution from beyond the seas have come from Australia, with 7,000,000, and Canada with 6,000,000. These distant possessions have done wonderfully, yet it is likely that their contributions have not been more than sufficient to meet the need for the deficiency in some parts of Ireland, and indeed England—caused by the unpopularity of the war with some classes there.

We may reasonably credit the United Kingdom, then, with raising 5,000,000 men from a population of 46,000,000; one in nine. That ratio, applied to the United States, would impose the requirement to raise 11,000,000 soldiers in less than two years.

Let it be remembered that Britain has done this without universal compulsion. Two years ago there was no more seeming prospect of a draft being made on Britain than there is today of its being made on America. The war was not then what it is now expected. When it began in the late days of July, 1914, to loom as a possible eventuality there was almost a universal detestation of the idea of engaging in such a struggle.

No nation, when this war started, conceived the mobilization of men and resources which has been accomplished. Go back to the fantastic statistical complications of a few years ago, in which were represented the "potential military strength" of nations on the basis of the highest theoretical recruitment. Not one of the countries now at war was credited, in these hectic calculations, with nearly so many military units of humanity as it now has under arms.

Who, again, believed that the economic strain of such a war could be borne, at this rate, thus long? Almost nobody. Yet the war has lasted two years, at higher pressure than could be imagined; it might go as many more, and the economic pressure, while serious, is not even yet the supreme one.

The explanation, of course, is that a country at war saves in a myriad other directions so that it may spend the waste on the fighting. The waste and the waste which the statistics gravely figure is entitled to be offset by the war savings. The war is not only huge, but in many ways constitute a useful lesson in thrift and sense. From the New York Times.

A Four Thousand Feet Leap

Feat of a French Officer is Without Parallel in the Present War

The feat of a young sub-lieutenant of the French artillery, Maurice B., in dropping 4,000 feet from a balloon without parallel in the recent war. There has been nothing quite like it. While he was in the air, he saw a number of spherical balloons at Verdun, a fierce storm, attended with thunder and lightning, and in consequence detached from their moorings and were blown down in lines. Several of the balloons were in the direction of Maurice B. Carried by the wind, which was in an easterly direction, he was blown away, he determined to fall, if at all possible within his own lines. But his balloon, caught in the storm, rendered impossible. He burned all his papers on board, and seeing there was no hope of escape, he threw his parachute, he seized it, and made a plunge from the height stated. His descent was not without the most dramatic by the storm, thunder and lightning and rain mingling to make the feat highly spectacular. Maurice B. was cheered on reaching ground, and his promotion was one of the most popular events of the month.

Her Way of Doing It

Gladys' mother was entertaining visitors, when suddenly the door was flung open and in burst Gladys like the proverbial whirlwind. "My dear child," said the mother rebukingly, "I never heard such a noise as you came downing downstairs. Now, go right back and come downstairs properly." Gladys retired, and a few moments later reentered the room. "Did you hear me come down last time, Mamma?" she asked. "No, dear," replied the mother. "Now, why can't you always behave like that? You came downstairs like a lad!" "Yes, Mamma," said Gladys dutifully, "I said down the banister."—Previous House Journal.

Eleven thousand four hundred British men teachers are serving with the forces and about 9,000 have been tested under the 147 system. In addition there are 147 women with the naval forces and 236 women acting as nurses. Teachers have been killed in Victoria Cross and 235 have been killed, 118 wounded and nine are missing.

Johnny was driving a hog to town. He met the preacher and frightened him. The hog became frightened and ran across the field, which caused Johnny to swear. When the hog stopped and the boy stopped and kindly inquired "Who brought you up?" Johnny replied "The hog brought me up. I came up a foot and drove this 4-d old sow."

Why Johnny Flunked

"What was the result of the flood?" asked the Sunday school teacher. "Flood," replied a brilliant youngster. "Chicago Daily News."

Rubbing Elbows

Blowing up a Mine Within Click of the German Rifles

Blowing up a mine, within the click of the enemy's rifles is an enterprise as hazardous as it is difficult of performance. And yet it is no lot of the fighting that the British soldier relishes with such respect it is to follow up the explosion with a honest charge.

"It was over a hundred yards from the shaft or outlet and only measured about 3 feet high by 30 inches wide. Thus fitted an officer who superintended a most successful tunneling operation."

"All the explosive had to be carried very carefully and placed in position, the Boches working so close to us that it was imperative to make no noise or the whole business would be given away."

After the explosive quantity of stemming, consisting of sandbags well packed, and rubble, had been built up to prevent the force of the explosion following the line of least resistance and simply expanding in the direction of our own lines.

This passing matter was so close to the German trenches that you could hear their rifle clicks as they fired at the explosion.

One of the greatest difficulties connected with these operations is to ventilate the galleries and avoid the noise made by mechanical ventilators or "sucking" machines.

Incidents at Verdun

Smothered Courage and Reckless Daring of French Defenders Are

H. Warner Allen special correspondent of the All British newspapers with the French army, gives the following account of the fighting that has been going on at Verdun straight through the line. One of the most tremendous must have been the German losses. Never have French troops been so close to the enemy as they were when they retired to grimly from the Bois d'Haumont, the Bois des Caures, the Herbeval, the line of the Bois de la Voivre and Douaumont. They fought to gain time, and gladly gave their lives for this object. Two divisions held up two German army corps for several hours. Every yard of ground yielded was paid for by the enemy a hundred times over.

There was a sergeant who, as his Colonel certifies from his own certain knowledge, accounted for sixty Boches with rifle bullets. He went the track shot of the battalion, and when the enemy were advancing he went up outside the trenches, and stood firm and gave away no better. He was shot and killed, but his comrades handed up to him rifle after loaded rifle, and he kept on firing until he was not touched, and after he had accounted for his sixty Boches, he was killed. He had lost his right hand, and I consoled him on his last luck. "That is nothing but a piece of good luck," said my life to France, and she has only taken my hand, so there I gain."

"In the latter half of the night I was on doggedly without food or drink. An artillery captain told me the story of a French soldier who, in the height of the assault, and when he had been firing round after round at the enemy, he was shot and killed. His right hand, and I consoled him on his last luck. "That is nothing but a piece of good luck," said my life to France, and she has only taken my hand, so there I gain."

How Belgians are Assisted

System by Which Food Supplies Are Distributed by Neutrals

Many people may be interested to know through what process the distribution of food to the starving people of Belgium goes in order to reach its destination with the least delay. The food is sent to the Belgian Relief Committee, 51 St. Peter street, Montreal, which is the official outlet for Canada. This in turn goes to the neutral commission, which, through the more fact that it is neutral, prevents Germany from profiting by the relief sent to the Belgians.

Cargoes of food are sent to Rotterdam and thence by train into Belgium. In Belgium there are 125 central warehouses under the control of American and from these warehouses the necessary food and other supplies are distributed to 4,000 Belgian communal committees. The communal committees issue the food to the Belgians as it is required and hand out of the supplies as permitted by the amount arriving.

Since the relief work was first started the neutral commission has handled to the neutral commission over $6,000,000 collected from British sources. The food is sent to the neutral commission, which, through the more fact that it is neutral, prevents Germany from profiting by the relief sent to the Belgians.

Portugal Has Been England's Faithful Friend and Ally For More Than Twenty Years

The entry of Portugal into the war was welcome to all of the allies, and most of all to England. Germany injured the Republic on the ground that its government are "the vassals of the large powers." Portugal has never been the vassals of England, but her government, like all the wisest of the world, has been guided by the same principle. Portugal has been England's faithful friend and ally for more than twenty years.

Sir Reginald Bader, secretary of the War Office, gave facilities, through one of his staff as escort, to see some of the huge war machine in full swing under pressure of out of the greatest war with which it has ever had to cope. It was an experience of several hours, exploring the labyrinth of the vast institution, fairly vibrating with energy at every point and yet proceeding with precision and efficiency in meeting the big part it is taking in the conduct of the war.

Some idea of the immensity of this war establishment may be had from the fact that its corridors are two miles long, good better than an hour. And along these two miles is a good sized city of people, over 4,000 engaged in the minute details of the war work, great and small, all the way from secretary of state for war, down to the lowest of the military hierarchy. And this is only the central establishment, for the war exigencies have been acquired for the military, and many outside buildings, business blocks and other premises have been acquired for the military.

The sudden extension of censoring, as a precaution of military defence has called for the service of a large number of censors, and a number of large business premises in various quarters have been acquired for the military censors' branch. Three or four other branches are at other points, and practically all the ordinary branches have grown into a separate government department with a Cabinet Minister. Yet the War Office still remains the throbbing centre of the war work; here, in the great questions of strategy and the campaigns in various theatres of the war are worked out, here the War Council meets, and here the staff hold their meetings, and here the many branches of military work, under the leadership of the General Staff, are worked out, here the War Council meets, and here the staff hold their meetings, and here the many branches of military work, under the leadership of the General Staff, are worked out.

The sudden extension of censoring, as a precaution of military defence has called for the service of a large number of censors, and a number of large business premises in various quarters have been acquired for the military censors' branch. Three or four other branches are at other points, and practically all the ordinary branches have grown into a separate government department with a Cabinet Minister. Yet the War Office still remains the throbbing centre of the war work; here, in the great questions of strategy and the campaigns in various theatres of the war are worked out, here the War Council meets, and here the staff hold their meetings, and here the many branches of military work, under the leadership of the General Staff, are worked out.

Secretary informed the council that he had taken proceedings to seize 1200 railroad ties from the Keystone Cement Co., to be sold for arrears of taxes.

Twelve EntombedIn Michel Mine

A terrific explosion occurred in the No. 3 mine at Michel, B. C., on Tuesday night at about 11.15, resulting in the probable death of twelve miners. The explosion took place during a terrific thunder and lightning storm, and is believed to have been caused by the electrical current being conducted into the mine by wire or track rails.

The body of Fire-Boss Thomas Phillips has been taken out dead, but so far none of the remaining eleven have been reached and practically no hope is entertained for their being found alive. Phillips leaves a wife and five children. The missing are David Davies, miner, married, wife and child; C. Devalder, miner, single; George Kmetz, miner, married, wife and four children; Jacob Mikus, laborer, single; Alex. Ticon, laborer, single; Harry Evans, laborer, married, wife and three children; P. Hrpka, timberman, single; Mike Drury, rope rider, single; Mike Marmol, bratticeman, single; Daniel Hall, hoistman, single.

A message to Mr. J. P. Patton on Friday last conveyed the news that his son Isaac had been wounded at the front. Just that day we received a letter from Pte. Arthur E. Farmer, announcing that Isaac Patton was taking to bomb-throwing, for which work he was very suited.

"To you," Capt. Koenig was quoted as saying, "the trip of the Deutschland is a great achievement. You mustn't be too enthusiastic over it, for a bigger surprise is coming. A great Zeppelin airship—or maybe I should say airships—are being built in Germany. In the not distant future one or more of them will sail through the air to the United States. Just as sure as the Deutschland came to America, so will the Zeppelins come."

Apprehension exists as to the fate of British prisoners taken at the time of the surrender of Kut-el-Amara to the Turks. Lord Robert Cecil said in the House of Commons at London on Monday that reported inquiries had been made through the United States embassy at Constantinople to ascertain the whereabouts of these prisoners, but that no reply had been received from the Porte. This, he said, inspired considerable misgivings, as the prisoners were compelled, after the fall of Kut-el-Amara, to cross the desert at the worst season of the year.

Notice To Red Cross Workers

Our annual report closes September 30. For the two years that this branch has been in existence our total of articles sent to Calgary numbers nearly 9500. We believe that by a special effort we can bring the number up to 10,000. Each member is urgently requested to do something for the next month. Come out to the weekly meetings and take some work home. Do your part toward making the report of the Blairmore Branch a record of which we may all be proud.

Letters From The Front

The following is a synopsis of a letter received from our fellow townsman, Mr. T. Edie, from David Kemp, dated Belgium, July 19th:

"Have great pleasure in writing you these few lines to say that I am 'in the pink,' hoping they may find you the same, also to thank you very much for the useful things you sent me through my wife. It was very good of you. Your kindness I appreciate very much, and will always remember you when using the safety razor. Well, Tom, I suppose you will be pleased to see by the papers where Fritz is getting his kicks all along the line. There is a lot more coming to him yet, which he will know all about in a short time. You will also have read where the Canadians have had some very hot work for some time. Fritz don't like the Canadians a bit, and the Canadians don't like him. He has a lot of nasty ways in sending over his shells. He don't even put labels on them, to say who I have seen had a pale moon look on their bugle. Can't say for sure if it's hunger or fright that makes him look so. I have been hungry myself when on a visit to Fritz, and may have looked pale, but one thing I know, I did not feel badly. I see you have lost the 192nd—that they have gone to Calgary. The town will be a bit quiet now. Soldiers generally came a little stir, no matter where they are quartered, for they are never down-hearted. My address

Pioneer David Kemp, 11th Platoon, D. Co., 1st Canadian Pioneer, R.E.F., ex-Army P.O., London, Eng."

Harry Burns, manager of the McLaren Lumber Mill at Blairmore, was called to Nelson last week end, owing to the death of his father, John Burns.
